Brian is Vice President, Corporate Responsibility, of the Bon Secours Richmond Health System, where he serves as the Corporate Responsibility Officer and the Privacy Officer. Bon Secours Richmond is a faith-based health system whose mission is to bring compassion to health care and to be good help to those in need, especially those who are poor and dying.

Prior to joining Bon Secours, Brian was in private health care practice with the Washington, D.C. office of Hogan & Hartson (now Hogan Lovells). Brian also previously served as an associate professor of law on the adjunct faculty at the American University, where his courses included Law in the Information Society (Privacy Law) and Health Care Transactions.

Brian's interest in health care stems from his service as a Green Beret medic with the 11th Special Forces Group.
